

JESSE ROBREDO INSTITUTE FOR LEADERSHIP AND GOOD GOVERNANCE

Build Capacities. Transform Communities.

The call for good governance is more resounding than ever.

The COVID-19 pandemic has posed threats to our communities in many ways—the collapse of our public health system, insecurity of livelihood and employment, heightened social inequalities, and various forms of disruptions of 'normalcy', among others. Given the enormity of the problem, local government units and other local stakeholders have been vital in unraveling and addressing these entangled issues. Many local leaders have been proactive and innovative in managing and responding to this crisis. This pandemic has tested and will continue to test these leaders in the front lines.

In the midst of the call for good governance and effective leadership in these times of crisis, the Jesse Robredo Institute for Leadership and Good Governance was launched, an e-learning platform that offer exclusive access to specialized and customized courses on topics related to good governance, effective leadership, and public policy. The Institute aims:

1

To pass on the important leadership principles and good governance practices exemplified by the late Sec. Jesse M. Robredo to aspiring leaders and practitioners from different fields.

3

To develop lasting networks among the cohort of leaders for exchange and knowledge transfer

2

To build a pool of experts and practitioners advocating for good governance, effective leadership, and inclusive policy-making who will mentor leaders and stakeholders from different sectors.

4

To introduce concepts and practices of effective leadership and governance to better respond to the needs of the times

Our courses are designed to respond to our ever-changing environment.

Transform your leadership

Courses are anchored on developing and strengthening the students' leadership capacities. Learn fundamental values and concepts of effective leadership and good governance from our pool of experts.

Learn from fellow leaders.

Courses will facilitate exchange of best practices featuring experienced leaders through round table discussions and intimate conversations with the students. Learn from their experiences and adopt best practices in your own contexts.

Create lasting solutions.

Courses are designed to be outcome-oriented. Develop concrete and context-specific solutions to community problems through the principle of people participation.

Be part of our growing cohort of diverse leaders.

Our courses cater to leaders of various backgrounds from the public, private, and development sectors. This diversity facilitates and deepens the learning experience.

Our pioneer courses.

Adaptive Leadership in Times of COVID-19 Crisis

Designed for leaders in the public and development sectors, the course aims to introduce and contextualize the basic framework of Ronald Heifetz' Adaptive Leadership to manage complex change and to navigate through difficult community behavior and engagements in times of crisis, particularly amidst the COVID 19 Pandemic. Focused on the application and contextualization of these concepts, the course will feature exemplary leaders who will share their experiences and best practices in addressing technical and adaptive challenges posed by the COVID 19 crisis.

Building Smart and Green Cities and Towns in a Post-Pandemic World

Designed for individuals from the public and private sectors who are interested in creating sustainable and livable communities through an interdisciplinary approach, the course will discuss both theory and practice with emphasis on real life cases and problems that towns and cities face in the period after the pandemic. This will touch on policy, innovation, governance, design, politics, public finance and implementation challenges.

Building Pandemic-Resilient Communities through Public Health Governance

Designed for local chief executives and local health leaders in responding to health crisis such as the present COVID-19 pandemic, the course is geared towards enhancing capacities of LGU officials to equip them with the knowledge, skills, and abilities (KSA) for good governance practices to address strategic and systemic challenges in building resilient local health systems that are able to provide responsive, sustainable, and equitable public health programs and services.

From Purpose to Impact: Reflections and Conversations about Public Service and Leadership

Designed for leaders in the local government, the course aims to provide a space and time for young public leaders to look back at their leadership journey, using this reflection as an impetus to learning important competencies that can deepen their commitment, and propel them to serve their communities with greater impact.

The Jesse M. Robredo Foundation, Inc. is a non-profit organization that seeks to introduce and perpetuate the legacy of genuine public service, good governance, and transformative leadership of the late DILG Secretary Jesse Robredo.

Since its establishment in 2012, the Foundation has been committed to promoting development and empowerment of local communities by embodying the principles of accountability, transparency, and people empowerment. This is actualized through various programs and services organized by JMRF its partners.
